

M.A. Philosophy in Konstanz

In Konstanz, you can study practical and theoretical philosophy at one of Germany's eleven excellence universities. Here, these two branches of philosophy work closely together, even collaborating on topics and areas of study. In our department, you'll also find a focus on the more contemporary issues in philosophy.

The international faculty members will work closely with you, providing excellent preparation for future doctoral studies or, equally for professions outside academia.

Unlike many other universities in Germany, here, you have the option of completing the program entirely in English or in German. In fact, students can choose to take courses in either language, tailoring their studies to their own needs.

The historical city of Konstanz is located on the beautiful lake that shares its name. Situated within sight of the Alps, you can find a wide range of leisure activities on the lake or in the mountains.

Citizens of a country within the European Union (EU) or the European Economic Area (EEA) are not required to pay tuition fees, but only an administrative fee for each semester.
